Partner Edward Normandin Authors Legal Update on SEC's Observations on Executive Compensation Disclosure

The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) recently provided observations and guidance on executive compensation disclosures by public companies. These observations are based on the SEC's review of proxy statements and annual reports two years after extensive revisions were made to executive compensation disclosure rules. Public companies should carefully consider this additional guidance when preparing executive compensation disclosures during the upcoming proxy season.

Pryor Cashman partner Edward C. Normandin has written an informative Legal Update about the SEC's observations and guidance. To read that Legal Update, entitled "SEC Provides 2nd Year Observations on Executive Compensation Disclosure," please click here.
