Pryor Cashman Launches New Patent Group

Pryor Cashman Sherman & Flynn LLP, a leading mid-sized Manhattan-based law firm, welcomes Andrew S. Langsam and Barry E. Negrin to its intellectual property group. With the addition of these seasoned patent law veterans, the firm now offers a full suite of intellectual property services.

The attorneys, who formerly practiced with a New York City boutique intellectual property firm, Levisohn, Berger & Langsam, LLP, collectively bring to Pryor Cashman more than 45 years of experience with patent prosecution and litigation.

“We are delighted that Andy and Barry have joined our firm,” said Pryor Cashman Managing Partner Ron Shechtman. “They are among the brightest minds in patent law in the New York metropolitan area. With their expertise we have put into place the final piece of our intellectual property practice.”

Langsam and Negrin provide the firm with the expertise necessary to handle a greater scope of intellectual property matters, including: patent prosecution; patent litigation; infringement opinions; patent interferences; due diligence and technology licensing.

For years, Pryor Cashman has been at the forefront of intellectual property law, providing services to its clients in the areas of copyright, trademark, internet, technology, life sciences, false advertising, licensing and branding, and trade secrets. Langsam and Negrin now give Pryor Cashman the ability to provide a full range of patent services to its clients.

Andrew S. Langsam is a distinguished intellectual property attorney and litigator with a practice spanning more than 30 years. He brings to the firm expertise in both patent prosecution and patent litigation. His clients include developers of medical products and devices, manufacturers and marketers of consumer products, as well as a multitude of companies and individuals involved in virtually every aspect of technology, manufacturing and marketing.

Langsam obtained his B.S. in Metallurgical and Materials Science Engineering from Carnegie-Mellon University in 1973. He went on to obtain his J.D. from George Washington University’s National Law Center in 1976. From 1977 to 1978, Langsam served as a clerk in the U.S. Court of Claims, where he was involved with patent infringement cases brought against the United States.

Barry E. Negrin, who worked closely with Andy Langsam at Levisohn, Berger & Langsam, LLC, has more than 14 years' experience drafting patent applications and infringement opinions, and litigating patent infringement issues, covering a spectrum of technologies.

He also prosecutes trademark applications and has appeared before the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Negrin obtained his Bachelor of Engineering degree in Mechanical Engineering at Cooper Union in 1989. He obtained his J.D. from Yeshiva University's Cardozo School of Law in 1992. From 1992 through 1995, he was an associate with Sughrue, Mion, Zinn, Macpeak & Seas in Washington, D.C., where he prosecuted patent applications in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. From 1995 through 1996, he was an associate with Howrey & Simon in Washington, where he represented clients in litigations and patent interference proceedings.
